Long ago, there lived a king known by the name of Shankheshwar. One day, Shankheshwar was asked for land by a yogi. The king then conceded that all the land that shall be covered by the yogi before sundown shall belong to him. The yogi had already begun his journey when he suddenly realized he had lost the handle of his 'Khukhuri' or 'Dap'. Subconsciously, he let out the sound 'Dap Ja' which came to be the name of his land.

Dapcha, in Namobuddha Municipality about 15 kms southeast of Dhulikhel. It is a ridgetop settlement, and was previously on the trade route that led to Kathmandu. The village has forty-five historic wooden and brick buildings. The local culture is historically Newar and being promoted for tourism.
